

Celebration of Life

Holding Hands

*The flowers may have withered, their smell no longer sweet,
The presents may have shattered into pieces at our feet.*

*The suit that you were wearing may have shrunk in its girth,
The dress that once did sparkle, may no longer be of worth.*

*The pictures may have faded, we might lose our wedding bands,
But none of it would matter as long as we are holding hands.*
